bumbleride indie 2008 manual

From the factories we partner with to the materials we choose, we take the time to think critically and act responsibly. Life is complicated enough so we include everything you need and nothing you don't. We promise straightforward, common sense design that doesn't try to be too clever. So you need products and services that work seamlessly and a partner that supports you if they don't. For us, it's not just about providing quality service, but caring about the service we provide. The frame of your Bumbleride is guaranteed to be free from manufacturer defects for a period of 3 years from the date of purchase. The fabric components, tires, and inner tubes are guaranteed to be free from manufacturer defects for a period of 1 year from the date of purchase. Damage due to wear and tear will be repaired or replaced at a reasonable cost. Register your Bumbleride here or by clicking the button above. I might have even raved a little. One year later, I STILL love my Indie, but in case you didn't guess already... we have another on the way and we are starting to see double. Thank goodness, Bumbleride is one step ahead of us with the Bumbleride Indie Twin. They seem huge and, well, they kind of are. There's no getting around the fact that you are transporting two, but through some sort of magic or sleight of hand, at twenty-nine inches wide, the Indie Twin slides through most doorways. And the Bumbleride Indie Twin is easy to push something my aching back truly appreciates, and unlike many double strollers, even tandems, the Indie Twin turns and maneuvers very smoothly. Like its single cousin, the Indie Twin could become my stroller of choice for cruising our Providence neighborhood. The Twin features two front swiveling tires that can be locked for brisk walks. A jogging wrist strap is also included. Bumbleride has transferred all of the best features of the Indie and made them independent so that each child has a customized ride. Baby can sleep while your Toddler sits upright. <http://liackseng.com/liackseng/upload/deh-p3600mp-manual.xml>

The fivepoint safety harness is easy to use and easy to adjust singlehandedly. Coordinated cute shoulder pads and a headrest for Baby provide a comfy fit. Each seat also has its own canopy. The canopies are large and offer great protection from the sun and the elements. The rear panel zippers off to extend the canopy forward or to increase air flow on hot days. Each footrest is adjustable from flat to vertical. We tested it with a Graco Snugride Infant Seat and our friend tested it with a Peg Perego Primo Viaggio Infant Seat. Although both seats are compatible, the adapter bar never felt truly stable with either seat. Our friend comments, "I never felt that the car seat was securely attached. I use strollers mostly in the neighborhood for walks around town. My kids have never been content to stay in their car seats for errands. My favorite Indie feature is the zippered pocket at the back of the canopy and with the Twin, there are TWO. The Twin's padded handle adjusts quickly from 32 to 45 inches high with two buttons at either side, making it easy to adjust when switching drivers or pushers. The storage basket is huge and is ideal for walks to the Farmers' Market or a busy day at the mall. The onestep brake stretches across the width of the stroller and is easy to operate with one foot. A clip keeps the stroller locked and a padded handle makes it comfortable to carry the Twin once it is folded. The fold is pretty compact for a double stroller and fits into the trunk of my compact car, though it doesn't leave room for much else. To unfold, pull on the handlebar and the stroller reappears. A quick unfold is important when impatient kids are waiting in the car! The 2009 model has a few changes and improvements that should be noted it has lighter three spoke wheels with a new backrest recline mechanism that allows for an even more compact fold. The sun canopy has been enlarged, and because the sun doesn't always shine, all strollers now come standard with a rain cover.<http://www.sydsparien.dk/files/fckeditor/deh-p3630mp-manual.xml>

Sadly, the footmuff is now sold separately, but it is a little more substantial for cold winters in the north. The bumper bars are also gone in the 2009 model. I like to have both kids next to each other, allowing them to interact. I suppose that could be a bad thing, but with the Twin's customizable features, the kids won't be in each other's way. When your kids ride tandem, the younger child usually has a terrible view. When riding in the Twin, both kids get to see the world and I can quickly pop around the side and talk to both kids at once. You won't need to play musical chairs if the older child wants to get out of the stroller to walk. Storage is the real difference. And, I do think I have experienced them all. Finding a stroller to suit your needs and wants requires research, test drives, and asking for many opinions. Been there, done that. I received the Bumbleride Indie Twin to review. Through a series of many posts, I will thoroughly explain the assembly, design and function of this stroller. I will try to explain all aspects, as I see it and provide you with enough information to make an educated and informed decision on whether the Indie Twin is a stroller that may very well be the stroller for you. It came to my door in one huge box. I was able to drag it to the driveway for assembly, yet I could not lift it alone due to the size. When I opened the box, I was pleasantly surprised that there was very little to assemble.

In the past, I've had strollers with all sorts of parts and bolts. The Indie Twin comes with only a few parts to put together, all Toolfree. I opened the main chassis and 1 snapped in the rear axle and brake bar. 2 attached the rear tires by simply lining up the frame forks and turn the tightening clamps. 3 Front tires slid right in, twist the cap and flip the lever. If you ever need to take the front tires off, it's just a matter of flipping that lever and unscrewing. Again, all with no tools. Now, I just needed to attach the accessories. Also included was one water bottle holder, that attaches to the right side of the handlebar. And that's it! My final take on the assembly and first impression of the Bumbleride Indie Twin Did you notice that Bumbleride Indie Twin has a metal frame. This I was really excited about, as all my others were plastic. Having a metal frame makes the Indie Twin durable and sturdy. I can lift the stroller with ease. My Next blog post for the Bumbleride Indie Twin will be specs and facts on this model, and how it compares with other brands. Yet, there is 5 great colors to choose from. It's gorgeous, offers a superb ride and has everything you need right in the box. If you're looking for a double that will take you anywhere from a walk down the street to light jog in the park the Indie Twin is worth more than a look. Assembly The Indie Twin isn't hugely complicated to put together, but because it is rated for light jogging, there's a bit more to attaching the wheels than just popping them on. It took about 30 minutes including popping on the rear axle, attaching the wheels, tightening them up and inflating the tires. Other than that it's just attaching the canopies, harness covers and multiuse bars. Included in the box are the stroller, tire pump, rain cover, infant headrest, adult cupholder and straps that can be used to convert the multiuse bar from a bumper bar to a car seat adapter. It only takes one car seat at a time, but it is compatible with most major car seats without a separate adapter. Features The Indie Twin has a lot of really great features. In addition to its super smooth ride with an easy push, it's decked out with everything you could want in a stroller. It performs so well because of 12" air filled tires, lightweight aluminum frame and rear suspension.

The front wheels fully swivel, but can be locked in the forward or rear facing position. The stroller is rated for light jogging which means you can use it for short runs or to chase down an escaping toddler without your front wheels shaking off or jostling your newborn. It's such a light push that you really might just feel like running even if you don't need to, I did. The Indie Twin does well as an allterrain stroller, but it looks more like a luxury stroller nicely padded seats, gorgeous colors, every detail included. The canopies are amazing. Complete with peekaboo windows and zippered storage pockets, they not only fully extend to the bumper bar, they also have zip off backs. This is perfect for added ventilation or accessing a crying baby without having to stop. The separate bumper bars are great too. It's so nice to have the option to use one, both or neither for different children. They're especially handy when you want to help keep the toddler from poking the newborn or you have a baby that wants to pull up a bit riding with an older child who just doesn't need a bar. Parents with and infant and older child will like that the Indie Twin offers many adjustments for each rider. The seats, foot rest, canopy and bumper bar are all independently adjustable. Plus a great capacity, both in weight and height 45 pounds with ample headroom for a very tall child. My huge 40 plus pound three year old fit with room to spare. He loves the seat and the canopy and he actually asks to go for a ride, not something he usually does. The seats and harness are well suited to a large child, but easily adjust down for an infant. The infinite position recline extends to a fully flat position and coupled with the adjustable leg rests make a comfy seat your your littler ones. This great stroller is also narrow, at 29 inches, it will fit through even the tightest door. An adjustable handlebar, huge basket and easy to operate rear foot brake are also part of this very lovely package.

Another plus is the easy fold. The rear handles also make it easy to pop in and out of the car. In Use For the main test ride I took the Indie Twin out with my 22 pound 9 month old and my 40 plus pound very tall 3 year old. We took a very long route which gives us a good trial over most types of terrain, no mud covered mountain sides, but most of your typical stroller situations are covered. Even with the two very different weights on board, the stroller performed really well over the worst spots without any drifting or pulling to one side. I've also had some doubles feel a bit tippy with a higher weight child on one side, but the Indie Twin feels very solid. Even over the very hardest, bumpiest terrain I was able to easily push one handed and as I mentioned earlier, the push is so light that it makes you feel like running a little. And even while jogging along over that same terrain, bumpy and broken or smooth sidewalks, the Indie sailed along smoothly even with nearly 65 pounds of child on board. Mulch and grass were also just as easy to glide over as the smoother sidewalks, nothing presented a problem. With the two more evenly weighted children on board, my 9 mo old with her 26 pound 2 year old brother, the Indie Twin just sailed along as if it were empty. Really, it was so easy to push it felt like I had left them in the car. The stroller even does well at Kindergarten drop off, fighting our way through a sea of swarming parents and children, with out any difficulties. Maneuverability is excellent and I even pushed it through the crowds while carrying my 3 year old, not something that is easy to do with most strollers, especially a side by side. The Indie Twins's performance is so superb that I could weave in and out of the crowd, over bumps, up and down hills, stopping and starting with one hand and a lot of extra weight on my hip. And despite it's 34lb weight, it is also easy to get in and out of the car.

When folded, it doesn't take up much room in the back of our minivan compared to other doubles, something that is impressive for a full featured stroller that has 12" tires. We also had room on the side for a small single stroller if needed. Did I say yet that I love it. I really do. And it is so very pretty. The Seagrass is a nice green with light blue details. Honestly, Bumbleride makes some of the prettiest strollers anywhere. Black and gray can be practical, but I love a happy stroller. There are also some terrific optional accessories. First is the very nice carrycot which includes the Bumbleride footmuff and seat liner. These can be used later with the stroller seat, a great touch. This lovely carrycot also handles to make transporting your baby easy and secure. It's also fairly simple to switch back and forth from the carrycot, seat or using a car seat, no major stroller transformations required to use all of your options with your newborn or to switch around for different children. The footmuff and seat liner combination can be purchased separately from the carrycot as well for your older children. Also available are the Snack Pack and the Jam Pack, two very clever accessories. The Snack Pack has a built in adapter bar so it can be popped on in place of the bumper bar another reason to love those independent bumper bars and opens up to provide two compartments for snacks, drinks or toys. The Jam Pack is a bag with 2 bottle holders and a waterproof lining that can be used on the stroller, as a shoulder bag or repurposed as a toddler backpack. The Bumbleride Indie Twin is a fabulous stroller. Beautiful in every way great to look at, amazing to push and exceptional included and optional accessories.

It is absolutely a luxury stroller, but it offers so much right out of the box and such impressive thoughtful attention to detail and functionality that it is a bargain compared to certain other strollers where everything is an option and the ride is often not nearly as nice. You get so much for your money and you will not be disappointed. An Indie Twin will take you from country to city in high style with supreme functionality to boot. On the Bumbleride site it says that their products “stand at the intersection of form, function and fun,” and that is so very true for this stroller. If you take your children out in the Indie Twin, you won't be able to help but have more fun. Likes Love the colors, especially the Spice and Seagrass Everything you need is included and the extras are fabulous too Super smooth ride, easy push, lots of fun Dislikes Only one the manual locking straps sometimes pop open, but not enough to be a real problem. An automatic lock would be nice. Are you having children close together. How easy is the pram to clean.

Does it fit in your car, or through the doorways in your house yep, some prams are the pushchair equivalent of a Hummer!. Work your way through our key points to consider, to help narrow your focus. And don't forget to print out our handy Pram Chooser Checklist before you hit the baby stores! We've answered some basic questions for you to get your head what's out there and what you might need. Make sure it comes with a tether strap. The front wheel can usually be locked. Can be used for twins, a toddler and a baby or two toddlers. This means bub can easily be transferred from the car to the pram and vice versa. The front wheel can usually be locked for running or unlocked for everyday walking and manoeuvrability. Often used as a second stroller or for travelling. Not recommend for newborns unless the seat lays flat. If you live in an innercity apartment and go everywhere on foot, your needs will be very different to a mum always in the car. You'll get great arm definition but your back may start to complain if the pram's too heavy and bulky. Allterrain prams have airfilled wheels and some form of suspension, which is great for active families who like to go off the beaten track. And if you drive to the dog park, don't forget there'll be a pram in the back, so wet Fido's sitting up front with you. It's like having that third arm we all wish we had. Some strollers recline flat so you won't need an additional carrycot. As baby grows, having a pram that reclines several degrees gives you options if bub wants to sleep. Shopping in. argh. Check that you can still put the shopping in the boot at the same time. If you or your partner play sport, can the cricket or tennis gear fit around the pram. If this is your first baby, and you planning three kids, two years apart, you'll be pushing a pram for the next eight years. So you'll want to make sure the pram you choose stands the test of time. The only drawback is they both can't sleep in the pram at the same time.

Make sure you check the storage capabilities and if each bub is able to see unobstructed. By getting a wellknown brand you'll increase your chances of being able to source parts eight years later if the handle falls off. Well maybe not the handle but if the shade hood gets a tear it can be replaced.
